HELENA, ABK., April 27, 1864. Important and successful military operation have been going on lately in the District of guerillas, under Ool. Josey, Ool. Dobbins Lieut. Swan, and Lient. Casteel, have heer haraseing our ontposts. Steamboats have been fired into from the Arkansas shore, planters arrested and drogged to rebel camps r arrest, and mules and horses stolen by nundreds and driven to be sold to private es beyond White river. Ayres and Taypailies beyond White river. Ayres and Taylor lost fifty mules, and, this number not satisfying the guerillas, they went still inther, and drove twenty-five mere from the plantation of M. C. Lenden. Large numbers of nules were also driven away trom the plantations of Dr. Pinney, Wiswall, Judge Warwick, Dr. Smittee, Buchanan, Leuderson, Pine and Moore Rice, and Moore.

Recently General Balord sent a scout into Arkansas with lists of the rebel forces, their iends and relatives, for the purpose of retali-tion. Whenever a mule was found bearing the hand of the planters about Helena, that make and all accompanying him were brought in her mule-pard mules stolen by her renegade sen, lieut. Swan. A mule marked "C. L." from Coman & Landon's plantation, was sufficient to condemn her, and her entire stock was confiscated by Capt. Mentyari, and driven into Helena. Well-disposed people, having no relatives or friends in the guerilla hands, end having been known to have never advised the stealing of property, were protected and allowed to go on with their crops. Thus 200 mules and horses were brought into Helena and returned to their owners.

After scattering Sanders's forces the scont made a sudden detour into Arkensas, below Luconia. The rebels were taken neawares. The Mississippi diversion had entirely blinded them. The result was the capture of six of the foremost gnerillas in the State of Arkansas-six desperadoes who had been bidding defiance to law, justice, and humanity for months. Among these men are, Lientenant Tom. C. Casteel, Lieutenant Year-by, Capt. Hanley, Tom. Quarles, Tom. Ston-um, Capt. Wilds. These captures with Ool. Jeeey, Capt. Weatherly, and Lient. Private property on land is also exempt from onfiscation, with the exception of such as may become booty in special cases, when taken from enemics in the field or in besieged towns, and of military contributions levied upon the inhabitants of the hostile territory. This exemption extends even to the case f an absolute and uuqualified conquest of the enemy's country." And onr own country, as a member of Christendom, has retofore observed this usage, bringing the eage indeed to cover the very point in hand, asmuch as the Government in 1820, speakamong the acts of legitimate war," because "as private property nowhere warranted by the outting to death all prisoners in cold blood and without a special cause might as well he pretended to be a law of war, or the right use poisoned weapons, or to assassinate.' The new organ is ignorant of the law of naions as exponaded by our own publicists and enforced by onr own country. The organ says, in derision of the cry in favor of the constitution as it is: But where do we find written in the con titution as it is anything that gives us a constitutional right to pull np agnn and shoot man or a thousand men, or to take them as clasoners, or to enter on lands, or to take supe done, however, as all agree, except some opperheads; and yet it is not written in the stitution as it is. Not so; on the contrary, it is all written

Our athers did not frame a system of government under which war with its legitimate acts is nalawful. Nor do their sons live under such a government. The new organ is ignorant of the constitution of the country.

Finally, the organ says, undertaking to define the aim of the abolitionists as contralistinguished from that of the Conservative Unionists:

Speculation in Food .- A correspondent of he Lexington Unionist, quotes entire a recent article of ours upon this subject, and

In addition, allow me to repeat: "Whoever goes to market knows the effects of combination among these who sell the products of the soil," &c. The hnyers are as much to blame as the sellers. Why! because they can if they will break up such combinations. How! do with less; and abeve all, let all interested, ss "buyers" in the market-honse, go to work and stop the hucksters. They are as completely organized as the army. Every road that leads from this city is "picketed" by them, and persons who would supply u about as usual, are "halted" and bough out; and the hucksters make ns pay what they please. If perchance any of the country pec-ple get "within the lines" with their stuff, the get within the lines" with their stud, te, they are attacked by the commanding Jenerals of the army of hucksters, and tenerally sorrender. Now sir, there is a standing city law against forestalling the market, why in the name of common sense do not the thorities enferce the law. Now for in stance, I saw a countryman come in this (Tuesday merning, April 19th, 1864), with ecme hundred dozen of eggs, opened his boxes, &c., and commenced selling to all who applied, a dozen to this one, two dozen to that one, and so on; when np steps one of the hnckster tribe (I'll give his name if re-quired) and took the whole lot. This thing has become so glaring that it should be step ped. And if the powers that be desire t protect our citizens, and this they should do, they would stop it. And if the towns people will imitate the farmers in their living, prices

o cur city. The charter gives the General Conncil the power to pass ordinances for the pnnishment of forestalling, regrating, and engrossing, and our market regulations expressly enjein that no person residing in the city shall personally, or by agent, sell in the market anything not made, raised, or slaughtered by himself, or bought by him out of the city and not on its way to market, under penalty of from five to twenty-five dollars. Now Barrill's Law Dic'ionary and Glossary describes forestalling as infinencing or affecting the market "by buying goods on the way thither with the intent of selling them again at a higher price, or by dissnading others from bringing their goods there, or by persuaning them to enhance the price of their goods." Regrating is to buy provisions and sell them again in the same market or within four miles of it, by which the price is enhanced. Engrossing is to bny np an article in large quantities, in order to raise a demand and control prices. Thus it will be seen that the law can have a perfect hold on the very men who do all the mischief and who have kept up high rates for a year or two past. They are not satisfied with moderate profits, but their demands are extortionate, and therefore instead of being conveniences they are quite the reverse in a pecuniary point of view, though we grant that they are beneficial after market hours, when confined to their legitimate business. All their operations, however, as far as they affect the public, are under the perfect control of the Councils, and if immediate attention is given to the subject incalculable advantages will result from it. Mr. Lincoln decrees universal emanination in the revolting States, and requires those States to ratity his decree in their or ganic laws before he will admit them to their constitutional relations in the Union, calling plies or other property from them, or in any way to deprive them of life, liberty, or property except by due process of law? It can hardly be said, however, that Mr. Lincoln, whatever his intention may have been, glvos to his foul action so much as a fair name, seeing that the action, as he himself represents it, is inspired by the flagitions sentiment that the end justifies the means. The action is fonl; bnt, to every right-minded and discerning person, the name he gives it is fonler still. Snrely few of those who would start at

However prejudiced these views may appear, they are in reality justified by circum stances which you may witness yourself, ou take the trouble of rnning over thountry, of visiting the industrial ostablish ments which necessity has compelled us to set up, of taking into consideration the vast material resources of which we dispose, the community of feelings which binds all classes from the humblest to the lofties, and the spirit of self sacrifice which breathes through the country and animates the masses. A little experience of our condition cannot fail to lead y and animates the masses. A little ex-mination of our condition cannot fail to lead cu to the conclusion that adversity has no their effect upon us than to draw closer the other thest upon us than to draw close the ties which unite us, and to make resistance sterner and stronger. In the South no financial crisis can be so disastrous as to broak us asunder, no battle so calamitons as to put in juopardy the existence of our government. and the trinmph of our cause. We hav st hundreds of thousands, the flower youth of this country; expended fifteen noted million dollars; and still the puls of our country heats as vigorously and as regularly as if half of our hest blood had not been shed, and the best part of our public and private fortune disbursed. With the North, on the contrary, every additional year of war tells festfolly upon the finances of the nation, endangers the existence of the government brings up new factions to life inrenent, brings up new factions to life, in renees anarchy, foments discontent, and in creaces anarchy, foments discontent, and incites a notable portion of the people to revolt. No wonder, then, if Mr. Lincoln is in greater fear of a deteat than Mr. Jeff Davis, because, with Mr. Lincoln, a reverso nuclemines the very foundation of his powers, while with us it rather strengthens it. The difference between ns and the North is that Mr. Jeff Davis can stand adversity without revil for the government for the is that Mr. Jeff Davis can stand adversity without peril for the government, for the finances, or for the final success of our canse, while Mr. Lincoln cannot. These opinions may appear, to say the least of them, singular; but if you look closely to the state of affairs, North and South, and especially to the dircoutent of a certain portion of the Western States, you will soon see that I do not exaggrated and that as a harvasid we want that war longer and more effectively than the War longer and more enectively than the North. Also, when I take into consideration the motives I have just mentioned, I do not hesitate in preferring a temporizing to an ag-gressive policy, and in advising our government to remain strictly on the defensive, trust-ing to time more than to bayonets for the overthrow of the war party in the North.

The English efficer, who communicated this conversation says he has since been in positien to ascertain that theee opinions are entertained by a large portion of the upper class of scciety in the Sonth, and by the heads of the rebel Government, who look npon anarchy and financial ruin in the North as likely to bring the war to a conclusion before the year is over. The arguments of Beanregard are of course all on one side, and there are no circumstances which justify his prejudiced view of the ability of the Government to maintain its financial resources. But if his premises were correct, his conclusions would be irrefutable. Financial ruin would bring the war to a conclusion, by the destruction of the Union. The rebellion can be subjugated think the American people fully comprehend the great principles at issue, and the Secretary of the Treasury did not lead, but followed pnblic opinion when he said that taxation and the reduction of expenditures to the lowest point compatible with efficiency will insure finan cial success. The same public opinion points with equal determination to mllitary success. It will be profitable in this connection to see what the London Tlmcs thinks of our monetary situation. In its issue of April 6th we

Tre financial policy of America exceeds European comprehension. Mere extravagance is certainly neither a novel nor a surprising rather than a rule in the administration of States. But in Enrope, when a country is in difficulties, the misfortune is publicly recogresset; whereas, in America, though the prod-igality of the government is beyond all con-ception, and debts are accruing at a rate abso-lutely nnexampled, the finance minister does not seem to take the matter to heart, or to imagine that the difficulty in prospect is worth consideration. In America not the least appreach is made to equilibrium between tax 4t or and expenditure. The Federals are spending nearly three times as much as we spend, and v as much as we pay. Their expenditure at this moment is certainly not less than one hundred and ninety million pounds a year, and is probably nearer two hundred million pounds. To meet this, Mr. Chase does not so much as propose to raise more than forty-five million pounds, and it is by no means sure that he will succeed in getting even this. Last year the results fell tar short of his calculations, and this year they may do so again. la any case, however, there will be a deficit of some thing like one hundred and fifty millio unds, which will he met by horrowing, and at enormons sum will be added to the na-

find the following:

It was suggested even in Congress that the sustoms and excise druiss should be doubled: but customs already yield a good third of the whole Federal revenue, and Mr. Chase has hitherto entirely failed to make anything ont of the excise. He reckoned last year upon £25,000,000 from that source, and obtained less than £7,000,000. All this while, too, even getting their propositions adopted, the deficit would still be going on at the rate of £100,-000,000 a year. They propose to raise £70,-000,000 or £80,000,000 instead of $45,000,000, and mainly, as they hope, from taxes on lnxuries; but the expenditure will still be more than double the income effect all the income han double the income, after all the increase.

We know that the Americans are a sanguine people, but how they can he deceived on this subject we cannot imagine. Confident as they are, they are also exceedingly acute, es pecially in money matters, and they must needs understand what it is to spend £200, 000,000 a year ont of £50,000,000. Yet the most observant of them only talk of putting the scoop a little deeper into the pockets of the rich, as if that could bring any material improvement in the case before them. The est, we suppose, rely on the "greatness," the 'youth," and the "elasticity" of their conrry, forgetting that all these possessions are lectining in value through the very extravagance now going on. A "young" conn-try means, among other things, a coun-try not yet in debt, but in this respect America is now as old as England. Its territories are immense, it is true, and its popula-tion may hereafter become fifty millions in-stead of thirty, but the prospects of that increase are greatly damaged by the impending weight of taxation and the possible dearness of land. Nevertheless, the extravagance goes on, and a system of finance utterly vicious goes on too. Not the least stint is put upon outlay; not the least spur is given to taxation. What little money is raised is raised by the very methods we have learnt to condema. If still. Snrely few of those who would start at real vice will be led to practise its lessons nader a disgnise so thin and base as this.

But now a word as to the dogma of the copperhead faction: that as soon as the rebellion in arms is overcome every rebel State. work, perseverance, and economy for bringing onrselves right. The Americans take a course exactly opposite. The Federal Secretary only expected from his income tax about £6,000, o, and it is still nnknown what proportio of this snm was actually obtained. Protective tariffs are regarded as the chief source of revenue, and the only idea of reform seems to consist in making them more protective still. The Americans, with a population smaller than our own, must look torward even after the war to an expenditure not less than ours, including a charge for debt at least as large. If they imagine that they can meet these liabilities without difficulty, we think they will find themselves mistaken; but if they should really achieve such a financial miracle, we
